

AEROSOL PACKAGE WITH OPTIMAL CONTENT VOLUME

Abstract

An aerosol package has a container that includes an optimum volume of a gas producing compound, such as an oxidizing compound, without exceeding the potential burst pressure of the container under a worse case scenario. A method for determining the optimum volume of the head space within the container under these conditions and a method for empirically testing the determined volume is described.